

Discovered in a Mycenaean tomb at Vaphio in the southern Peloponnese, the gold cup at right depicts the capture of a wild bull, a ritual animal of the Greeks. The gold pendant at left, resembling a pomegranate, was found on Cyprus, more than 500 miles southeast of Greece, but was probably made by a Mycenaean goldsmith.